CLAIMS 1-11 ARE PENDING

1. The text of those sections of Title 35, U.S. Code not included in this action can be found in a prior Office action.

2. Applicant's arguments filed 12/22/03 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive.

Applicant has changed the scope of claims 1-6, requiring new grounds of rejection for at least those claims. [In particular, ascertaining an attribute is amended to determining the source, and price becomes data set.]

With respect to the claims as a whole, Applicant fails to appreciate the breadth of the claims. The Response centers around three paragraphs on page 7 that appear to be directed to the independent claims; P1 at line 13 and after, P2 at line 19 and after, and P3 at line 22 and after.

As to P1, it may apply to claim 1 but not to claims 7 or 8; P2 may apply to claim 7 but not to claims 1 and 8. It is stated in P3 that: "the Examiner has not identified an attribute of Herz that is independent of the search request that is used to route the request to an appropriate database as presently claimed" The Examiner respectfully points out that the detailed rejection of this claim occupies most of page 4 of the action. It is not clear whether attribute, independent, search request, route, or database is unaddressed.

In the interest of compact prosecution, the rejections below address these changes and concerns with respect to Herz (and Lefkowitz) in detail.

3. Claims 7-10 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Herz, US 6,029,195, 22 February 2000.

This maintains the rejection of the previous action.

Herz is directed to identification of desirable objects via either the Internet or an intranet [ABSTRACT; FIG 1; COL 31 lines 13-21 and elsewhere].

As to claim 7, to the extent that claim 7 is not clearly anticipated by Herz, Herz repeatedly refers to multiple users of the system who search for target information from multiple sources [FIG 1; COL 5 lines 6-20 and elsewhere].

In more detail: The multiple users of Herz correspond to multiple sources (each user in FIG 1 inherently represents a search engine such as a browser at terminal Ti), the multiple targets correspond to multiple databases, and the targets are selected in relation to the user [COL 17 Matching Buyers and Sellers is exemplary]. In more particular, see the variety of target sources used as examples at COL 10 line 29 and after.

As to claim 8, box 1604 of FIG 16 depicts matching a query (a request; a source; a search engine) with an information source. The resulting retrieval is noted in box 1608.

The target objects are generally characterized by attributes determined by a query, but the sources of desirable objects are varied on dimensions that are not determined by user profiles. See COL 6 line 59 and after, where the sources may include news, electronic mail, published documents, and product descriptions. In particular note COL 7 lines 24-29, where either a movie or a novel might match a user interest. These generally have distinct sources, and this aspect of the system is further discussed at COL 7 line 58 and after. Another aspect of this limitation is discussed with respect to a user query that can generate a response from multiple experts [COL 83 line 29 and after]. Another aspect is related to properties such as availability of servers [COL 78 line 38 and after]. Multiple source domains are also addressed at COL 74 line 7 and after. Herz also addresses the use of attributes such as the number of target objects available at a source [COL 71, line 24 and after]. Another aspect of the source that is addressed is bandwidth [COL 37 line 32 and after. Herz discusses attributes of virtual channels that are not tied to specific attributes of requests at COL 35 line 56 and after.

As to claim 9, see COL 31 lines 13-14; COL 37 lines 29-31 and 50-57.

As to claim 10, Internet service providers are frequently accessed with local phone numbers, and access on an intranet clearly is related to the location of a user. As noted in FIG 16, location of a server is a component of the process of determining a network vendor, and clearly location in such a case is related to the location of a user with respect to a vendor.

A specific example in Herz at COL 10 lines 4-20, directs requests to experts on the basis of qualification, but the attribute that they are employees is independent of the request and related to the location of a user, as is "the user is an employee (employer)".

4. Claims 1-6 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Herz, US 6,029,195, 22 February 2000.

As to claim 1, Herz repeatedly provides the choice of Internet and intranet. The former generally requires a Web browser; the latter may not. Virtually any database is managed by a DBMS, is indexed, and is searched with an appropriate search engine. In the case of a local database, a browser is not required.

The other elements of claims 1-6 are rejected in the analysis above with respect to claims 1 and 7-10 and these claims are rejected on that basis.

5. Claim 11 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Herz, US 6,029,195, 22 February 2000 in light of Lefkowitz, US 2001/0037250, 1 November 2001.

As to claim 11, the name of data is nonfunctional descriptive material and cannot render nonobvious an invention that would have otherwise been obvious.

For the sake of completeness:

Herz does not explicitly address a tax rate as a retrieval target, but does teach the retrieval of information from vendors. Lefkowitz is directed to retrieval of information about duty free goods [ABSTRACT; 0004-0005], which inherently is determined by a tax rate applied or not applied at a source.

The use of the Internet in Herz is multi-state and global, and it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to retrieve a tax rate from a vendor because it determines the effective total cost of goods.

6. THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
